ONE TRUSTED PLACE
for Children and Families

Dear Friends,

As 2026 nears a close, Child Saving Institute (CSI) reflects on significant growth and impact. This September marks one year since the historic merger with Children's Square U.S.A., a milestone that has strengthened our ability to serve children and families across the region. In that time, the Children's Square campus continued to be a place of stability, support and hope for children and families navigating life's most difficult moments.

Looking ahead, 2027 brings exciting opportunities for the southwest Iowa community. Renovated and remodeled spaces across our Children's Square campus, including an outpatient behavioral health center, will expand access to critical services for children and families. CSI is proud to bring therapy services to the Council Bluffs community. The need for accessible, quality mental health care is apparent and growing. You can read more about the Children's Square campus renovation and opening of outpatient therapy services on page four.

The merger has also created a deeper impact across Omaha and Council Bluffs. In 2025, CSI provided support to nearly 5,000 children and families. This is a 30% increase in clients served compared to 2024. Behind every number is a story of healing and hope, made possible through the support of our donors, our partners and our communities.

As you explore this issue of "Hope in Action" you will see the first-hand impact of CSI's services. You'll hear from parents who champion the teachers helping their children thrive, students who receive classroom support and are now ready for the next chapter in their education and a mother who found hope and healing when she needed it most. Families come to us for different reasons, but the goal is always the same: meet them where they are and remain a consistent partner as their needs change.

Whether you have supported CSI for years or you're just getting to know us, we are grateful you are part of this journey. We invite you to continue standing beside us as we build brighter futures together, in one trusted place.

With Heart & Humanity,

Jaymes Sime
President & CEO

Children's Square campus renovations support a stronger future

This summer, Child Saving Institute (CSI) continued its investment in the Children's Square campus in Council Bluffs with a series of significant facility improvements designed to support children and families across southwest Iowa.

These renovations, which began in June 2026, are part of a larger effort to ensure the campus remains safe, functional and sustainable while meeting the evolving needs of the community. Following a comprehensive review of the campus, CSI identified opportunities to address aging infrastructure, reduce maintenance concerns and prepare key facilities for future use.

Since construction began, two long-vacant buildings, the former childcare center and Kinney Cottage, have been demolished. Removing these unused structures has opened up space on campus, improved safety and reduced ongoing maintenance needs, helping create a more welcoming environment for children, families, staff and visitors.

At the same time, renovations are underway at the Visitor Center, which is being transformed into a new outpatient behavioral health clinic. The Behavioral Health Center is expected to open in 2027 and will expand access to mental health services in southwest Iowa, providing children, youth and families with care closer to home. Planned services include individual therapy, family therapy, trauma-informed care and medication management support.

Additional improvements are also taking place in the Lied Center, where critical safety and infrastructure updates are being completed, including a new HVAC system and roofing repairs. Once renovations are complete, the renovated Lied Welcome Center will serve as the campus's primary visitor center and guest check-in location, with reopening anticipated in 2027.

Throughout the renovation process, some staff and services have temporarily relocated within the campus to allow construction to move forward safely and efficiently. Despite these changes, Children's Square campus programs have continued serving children and families without interruption.

"These improvements are about more than buildings," said Jaymes Sime, president & CEO of Child Saving Institute.

"They are about creating safe, welcoming spaces where children and families can access the support they need today while ensuring the Children's Square campus remains a place of hope and healing for generations to come," he added.

As the first phase of renovations continues, CSI looks forward to sharing these renewed spaces with the community and expanding access to critical services for families throughout southwest Iowa.

CSI BEHAVIORAL CENTER IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

Opening doors and removing barriers to mental healthcare access

Child Saving Institute (CSI) is proud to bring outpatient therapy services to its Council Bluffs Children's Square Campus in 2027. Through this, CSI is expanding access to mental health care in southwest Iowa.

These therapy services are desperately needed as the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) ranks Iowa lowest among states nationally for access to mental health treatment. This is further proven with the Iowa Department of Public Health finding that 92 of Iowa's 99 counties experience a mental health care shortage. Most troubling of all, NAMI also found that one in six Iowa youth experience a major depressive episode. Mental health concerns are complex for youth and families to navigate, especially when services are limited in their area.

That's why CSI is proud to close this gap and continue to meet families where they are. The opening of the Children's Square campus outpatient therapy clinic isn't just a milestone for CSI; it's a positive step towards comprehensive mental health care for southwest Iowa youth.

In 2027, CSI plans to open the Behavioral Health Center on its Children's Square Campus in Council Bluffs. Opening the outpatient therapy clinic is an important step in addressing the growing need for mental health services in southwest Iowa. The clinic will offer individual therapy, family therapy, trauma-informed care and medication management support, helping children, youth and families access comprehensive mental health support closer to home.

As community needs continue to grow, CSI plans to expand the clinic with additional therapists dedicated to serving the Council Bluffs community. The addition of outpatient therapy services will complement CSI's existing Behavioral Health Intervention Services (BHIS), allowing families access to a broader continuum of mental health care through a trusted provider. By accepting both Medicaid and private insurance, CSI is helping make high-quality mental health care more accessible to families throughout southwest Iowa.

Tiny Violins

With a Big Impact

A child holding a violin for the first time may seem small. But in that moment, something big is unlocked. Curiosity is sparked while confidence and creativity grow as the child discovers a new way to learn.

Child Saving Institute (CSI) is bringing this opportunity to more Omaha families through a new collaboration with String Sprouts, a program that provides free and low-cost music lessons for young children alongside their caregivers. As a newly designated String Sprouts partner site, CSI is increasing access to high-quality music education for both the children it serves and young learners across the broader community.

"It's exciting to see community partnerships unfold in ways that truly enrich children's lives," CSI's Vice President of Education Holly Marasco said. "Providing our students with additional opportunities like music education extends the high-quality learning experiences we offer every day and supports growth far beyond the classroom."

String Sprouts is a donor and grant-funded five-year music education program created by Omaha Conservatory of Music (OCOM) for children ages three to eleven years old, with students beginning at ages three to six years old. The program removes common barriers to arts education by offering instruction, instruments and learning resources at little to no cost. Through this new partnership, violin classes will be held Tuesday evenings at CSI beginning this fall. Select spots will be reserved for CSI childcare students, while the remaining spots are open to community families.

"Early childhood music education has meaningful benefits that go beyond learning a new skill. Music education has been shown to improve classroom behavior, extend attention span, boost motor skills and enhance development in math and language," said Lora Moriarty, associate director of Spring Sprouts and Group Learning at OCoM. "For many children, music also becomes a powerful outlet for self-expression and confidence."

Bringing String Sprouts to CSI reflects a shared commitment to expanding access, strengthening communities and supporting the whole child.

"This is about more than music. It's about opening doors to new opportunities and helping children build foundational skills that support lifelong learning," Marasco said.

A night of nostalgia

WITH A LASTING IMPACT

Culinary Remix: Music, Moments and Mission—Reimagined brought together community members and supporters for an evening inspired by the spirit of the '90s and a shared commitment to children and families.

Guests celebrated the meaningful work taking place at Child Saving Institute's (CSI) Children's Square campus in Council Bluffs while enjoying great food, live music and nostalgic fun. The evening included honoring the 2026 Jason Award winners, Debra S. Kaplan and the Council Bluffs Police Department (CBPD).

Kaplan and CBPD were recognized with the Jason Award for their unwavering commitment to community service with compassion, care and integrity. CSI was proud to present them with this much deserved award, and we are honored to continue this Children's Square campus tradition.

Events like Culinary Remix help raise awareness and support for vulnerable children and youth in the Council Bluffs community. Through the support of attendees, donors and the community, Children's Square campus continues to serve the children and youth who need support. This support includes children and youth temporarily staying at the emergency youth shelter in Council Bluffs.

In 2025, CSI served nearly 1,000 children through our residential treatment programs, most of which are largely based on the Children's Square campus in Council Bluffs. Children and youth are often placed in the Children's Square shelter because their parents may struggle to care for them or they may be navigating complex mental and behavioral health challenges. It's in this time of need when the dedicated staff at Children's Square campus are there to provide hope, stability and a path forward.

Youth Care Specialist at the Children's Square campus emergency youth shelter Miskiy Hussein, finds real joy and reward in her work with the children at the shelter.

"The kids at the end of the day, are just kids," Hussein said. "I love getting to know the kids and being their safe space ... You're building these kids to be a better version of themselves."

At CSI, every event is more than getting together for a memorable evening. It is an opportunity to invest in brighter futures for children and families.

GROWING SKILLS BUILDING KINDERGARTEN READINESS.

Some children in early childhood education may struggle with routines, transitions or socializing. That's okay and completely normal. KidSquad helps children build skills in these areas before they become barriers to learning.

In a local childcare center, a boy named Harry was struggling with classroom transitions. As the pre-K class moved through their day and changed activities and learning stations, Harry felt anxious and out of place, with no way to express his emotions other than tears and disruptive behaviors. This is when KidSquad came to help.

Child Saving Institute's (CSI) KidSquad program is an early childhood mental health program that partners with childcare centers to foster children's development. KidSquad addresses social, emotional or behavioral challenges through support offered directly at childcare centers.

This support not only uplifts the child, but positively impacts the classroom, the family and the community.

KidSquad responds to each child's unique needs in real time, directly at their childcare center, meeting them where they are. It helps children in childcare build the social, emotional and behavioral skills they need to thrive before they start kindergarten.

The impact of this program extends beyond one child. KidSquad consultants work directly with teachers and parents to implement strategies and techniques to create positive changes in the classroom, at home and the community.

KidSquad Consultant Liz Kessler has worked at CSI for half a decade but her passion for helping children learn and grow has guided her throughout her career.

"I had gone to school to be a teacher," Kessler said. "I had practicums in kindergarten classes and the biggest thing I saw was kids knew their ABCs, but the social, emotional skills were really lacking. They had a hard time making friends, they couldn't be patient, they had a hard time regulating themselves. I find the most passion in helping kids get ready for kindergarten that way."

Kessler said witnessing children's growth is one of the most rewarding aspects of her work.

"Being able to advocate for those kids is so rewarding," Kessler said.

"Being the voice for the teachers and parents and helping them find the services they need and just seeing overall growth. Whether it's a lot of growth or a little, it's just really rewarding to know I had an impact."

Kessler emphasized that supporting children goes hand in hand with supporting the teachers and parents who care for them every day. She said it is crucial to empower adults in the child's life for long-term success.

"It's really rewarding to see a change in the teachers and parents," Kessler said. "We do work with the kid, but ultimately, we're working with the adults in their life to help the child. It's really rewarding to see them try new strategies I teach them and to have it be successful."

KidSquad is grounded in an evidence-based framework that promotes positive behavior and social-emotional development in young children, helping consultants identify and implement supports tailored to the needs of individual children and classrooms.

Through targeted strategies, consultants like Kessler work with teachers, parents and children to address concerns such as emotional regulation, transitions, routines and relationship building. They observe behaviors in the classroom for a short period of time, then work with teachers and parents to implement strategies to help.

Kessler was sent to Harry's classroom. He struggled with emotional overwhelm when his class transitioned into different activities. While working with Harry, Kessler read him a story about Tucker the Turtle. This provided Harry with a new strategy when he felt overwhelmed. Rather than expressing those emotions through unsafe behaviors, he learned to tuck his head in his shirt, like Tucker the Turtle. This skill worked to regulate Harry's emotions both in and out of the classroom.

"His mom shared an instance in the grocery store where Harry became upset," Kessler said. "But instead of melting down, he calmly tucked his head in his shirt and took deep breaths until he felt better. She also shared that he now tries to teach the strategy to his younger sister and friends. This truly captures the impact of KidSquad."

In the classroom, Kessler and Harry's teachers saw additional progress through strategies from the Pyramid Model. By implementing visual supports and verbal reminders around classroom transitions, Harry gained confidence and became more comfortable navigating changes in routine that had previously felt overwhelming.

Before Kessler met with Harry, his teacher and his parents had serious concerns about his emotional readiness for kindergarten. Now, Harry has successfully completed KidSquad services and is ready to take that next step in his educational journey.

Harry and his family are not alone in facing uncertainty around leaving early childhood education and starting kindergarten. Many young children struggle with transitions, new routines and making friends at their childcare centers. Kessler encourages families to remember that there is no such thing as "bad behavior." Instead, behavior is a form of communication from a child who may need help expressing their feelings and needs.

"There's safe and unsafe behavior, not good and bad," Kessler said. "Every behavior is a form of communication; we just have to figure out what they're trying to tell us."

If your child or student is experiencing emotional or behavioral challenges that would impact their readiness for kindergarten, please visit childsaving.org/kidsquad for additional information on these services.

It takes a village TOGETHER, FAMILIES AND TEACHERS THRIVE AT CSI

As the back-to-school season kicks off, families prepare for new routines, new milestones and a new school year. At Child Saving Institute (CSI), back-to-school season is also a reminder of the dedicated teachers that help children thrive every day. Celebrating our teachers goes beyond one season; it's integral to the culture of our child development centers.

CSI's Early Childhood Education (ECE) is more than high-quality childcare and curriculum. It is about relationships, community and deep appreciation for the teachers who show up for children and families every single day. One powerful example of that is the Family Impact Team.

When Anna Dwyer enrolled her first child at the A.W. Clark Child Development Center, she quickly recognized the exceptional care her child received. She then saw an opportunity for families to give back to the teachers who make that care possible. With the support of other parents, Dwyer founded the Family Impact Team.

"We wanted to build these teachers up because they're with our kids all day, every day," Dwyer said.

Dwyer said she was inspired by the dedication and care she saw from CSI teachers each day as they nurtured her child and so many others. The Family Impact Team was created to offer consistent, meaningful support to the teachers who create safe, enriching environments for children during some of their most important developmental years.

The group's efforts range from simple gestures to larger initiatives. Activities include coffee and donuts, celebrating Teacher Appreciation Week, fundraising events like book fairs and helping teachers supply their classrooms with new materials for enhanced learning opportunities for all children in their care.

"The goal of the Family Impact Team is really to support teachers and show them the appreciation they deserve," Dwyer said.

Over time, the Family Impact Team has also helped cultivate a strong sense of connection among families. This community has encouraged more parents to become involved, including Kristy Kunkel.

Kunkel joined the Family Impact Team after her first child began attending A.W. Clark in 2025. She said the exceptional care and compassion motivated her to give back through involvement with other parents.

"I feel so lucky to have such trustworthy and just amazing teachers. I feel so confident dropping my children off that I want to be able to give back in any way," Kunkel said. "I'm just so grateful for CSI and having such a great place to send my children. I want to be able to give back in any way I can."

CSI staff say the Family Impact Team plays an important role in strengthening relationships between families and educators. ECE Educational Supervisor Brooke Lewandowski said she appreciates the collaborative efforts of the Family Impact Team.

"The Family Impact Team has been a great way for us to include families in what is going on at our center," Lewandowski said. "I enjoy meeting with the parents and getting their thoughts and ideas of ways we can improve and what they enjoy."

For Dwyer, the group reflects the long-term relationships built at CSI. Teachers often work with families for years, caring for multiple children as they grow and gain siblings.

"It's just like a big family," Dwyer said. "These teachers have been with me for over six years between my oldest and my youngest. They've seen my kids grow up."

Kunkel echoed the feeling of connection.

"CSI does a great job of building community," Kunkel said. "Parents feel connected."

Through the Family Impact Team, Dwyer and Kunkel have watched other parents step up in generous ways. Those moments reinforce the purpose of the group and the value families place on the teachers who care for their children.

"I'm proud of the generosity I see when we are putting together opportunities to celebrate the teachers," Kunkel said. "It's really impactful."

“CSI DOES A GREAT JOB OF BUILDING COMMUNITY. PARENTS FEEL CONNECTED.”

While the Family Impact Team continues to grow, it also faces the natural challenge of change as children move on to kindergarten. Keeping new families engaged is key to sustaining the group's mission.

"Our biggest goal is to just keep the Family Impact Team on track," Dwyer said. "As kiddos get older and move into kindergarten, we have to find new parents who care about creating that community within our child development centers."

For families considering CSI or early childhood educators looking for a supportive, collaborative workplace, the Family Impact Team offers a clear picture of the culture within CSI's ECE programs. It is a place where teachers are valued, families are engaged and children thrive because of the strong relationships surrounding them.

"I'm so proud to say that my kids go to CSI," Kunkel said.

Choosing Joy

AT ONE TRUSTED PLACE

Clara* found herself in a terrifying position shortly after she became a mom. Her partner had become controlling and threatening, creating an unsafe environment for her and her baby, Joy*.

“I couldn’t continue to let this man try and control my life because he knows that I would do anything for my daughter,” Clara said.

After a dangerous incident that involved law enforcement, Clara realized she could no longer stay in the relationship.

“We almost lost Joy because of his actions,” Clara said. “That was my biggest wake up call. I think the drugs really got the best of him.”

Determined to protect her daughter and build a safer future, Clara found domestic violence crisis support at the Women’s Center for Advancement. As she began to heal and rebuild for her and her little girl, she was referred to Child Saving Institute’s (CSI) Family Empowerment Program (FEP).

Family Empowerment Program is a trauma-informed program that helps survivors of domestic violence heal, regain stability and create safer futures for their families through group meetings, one on one case management and supportive services.

“It’s not easy coparenting with your abuser,” Clara said. “It’s just traumatizing. But I wasn’t prepared to be a single parent. I wasn’t confident that I could do it.”

Like many survivors, Clara faced the overwhelming challenge of starting over while also navigating parenting, healing from trauma and planning for the future. Through Family Empowerment Program she found more than support and resources; she found an advocate.

Her family support specialist at CSI became a trusted source of encouragement, guidance and practical resources. This helped Clara address immediate needs while building confidence in herself.

“Family Empowerment Program has gotten me through a lot of difficult emotions,” Clara said. “They give you the tools to be a better version of yourself. It doesn’t matter what kind of situation you’re in; there’s always someone that’ll help you figure it out.”

The program’s support extended beyond one-on-one guidance. Through the Family Empowerment Program groups, Clara connected with other survivors who understood the challenges she faced.

“These women are strong,” Clara said. “Being with other women like that, you see that you’re not alone and you have a lot of people working through the same thing.”

For many participants, that sense of community becomes a powerful part of the healing process. Sharing experiences with others who have similar trauma helps reduce isolation, build resilience and remind survivors that recovery is possible. Family Empowerment Program’s structured groups are designed to create those connections while teaching coping skills, emotional regulation and strategies for long-term healing.

As Clara continued her journey, she discovered that support at CSI did not end with Family Empowerment Program. She also found CSI’s A.W. Clark Child Development Center, where Joy receives nurturing care and high-quality early learning experiences that help her grow.

Through specialized therapy, children and families can work through trauma experienced as a result of domestic violence, strengthen relationships and develop healthy coping skills. Mental Health Services are also available for families navigating everyday challenges, providing support that promotes long-term emotional well-being. Together, these services create a continuum of care that address immediate needs and future goals, ensuring families have access to the resources, skills and support systems they need at every stage of their journey.

“They give you the tools to be a better version of yourself”

Today, Clara and Joy are thriving. As she prepares to graduate Family Empowerment Program, Clara is creating the safe, stable future she once thought was out of reach. Through the combination of CSI’s services, Clara and Joy found more than support. They found healing, hope and the opportunity to build a future free from violence all in one trusted place.

PurseOnalities

Where Fashion Meets Philanthropy

In 2025, Child Saving Institute's (CSI) helped nearly 150 women find safety, healing and hope after experiencing domestic violence—women like Clara and children like Joy. For every woman served, there is a family rebuilding their future, discovering strength after trauma and creating a new path forward.

Nearly half of all women in Nebraska have experienced intimate partner violence or domestic violence, according to the Omaha Community Foundation. This is higher than the national average. Domestic violence is a local issue, impacting thousands of people in our communities and their loved ones. When navigating life after domestic violence feels overwhelming, CSI's Family Empowerment Program is here to help.

"I feel so supported and uplifted," a former Family Empowerment Program client said. "I'm just surrounded by good people at CSI ... it's changed my life."

Testimonies like this are the reason CSI gathers each year at PurseOnalities, where fashion meets philanthropy. Through the support of our community, women leaving unsafe situations receive resources, guidance and encouragement they need to build safer, healthier lives.

Substitute Santa 2026

Because Every Child Deserves Holiday Magic

For many children, the holidays are filled with excitement, wonder and the anticipation of gifts under the tree. But for families facing financial hardship, the holiday season can also bring worry and difficult choices.

Child Saving Institute's (CSI) Substitute Santa Toy Drive helps make the season brighter for local children and families. Through the generosity of our community, new, unwrapped toys and gifts are collected and distributed through CSI programs to children who may otherwise go without.

What makes Substitute Santa especially meaningful is that parents remain at the center of the holiday experience. CSI staff carefully match donated gifts to each child's age, interests and needs, then provide them to parents, who wrap and present the gifts themselves. Whether a gift comes from Santa, Mom, Dad or another loved one, it allows families to create joyful holiday memories together.

A simple donation can ease a parent's stress, preserve a cherished holiday tradition and put a smile on a child's face on Christmas morning.
